SUPPORTING CONSERVATION &
COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT

Our Sustainability Levy, which is charged on a per-person-per-night basis at Dulini, serves as a means to foster deeper comprehension and consciousness among our guests regarding the favourable effects of their visit on conservation initiatives and the welfare of local communities in the Greater Kruger region. We have faith in the potential of responsible tourism to generate substantial positive transformations, and through the implementation of this levy, we are committed to leaving a lasting and valuable impact on this invaluable ecosystem.

The esiDulini Trust

The esiDulini Community Trust is a registered non-profit organisation reaching out to the communities surrounding the Sabi Sand Nature Reserve. We believe we have a responsibility to extend our hand to our neighbours who live rural lifestyles far from the reach of government spending and service provision.

Sabi Sand Nature Reserve (GCC)

Our GCC Levy plays a pivotal role in the security and protection of wildlife, as well as in facilitating ecological management within the Greater Kruger Area.

Land Management Levy

As custodians of over 1860Ha of land within the SSNR Dulini takes responsibility for various conservation efforts. These include fire management, water management, protection of large red-listed trees, erosion site rehabilitation and management, control of alien plant species, and active involvement in Greater Kruger research projects, such as Ground Hornbill research, Vulture research, Elephant research, and Leopard research. The land management fee contributes to the costs associated with these conservation interventions on the land under our direct management.

Our involvement extends to actively supporting various conservation initiatives, including research projects within the Greater Kruger Region. This fee is directed to the Sabi Sand Nature Reserve and is crucial for the operational functioning of the reserve. It aids in funding essential activities such as fenceline maintenance, anti-poaching efforts, and overall security measures.

Bushbuckridge Community Levy

Bushbuckridge is a local community bordering the reserves of the Greater Kruger. The region faces challenges in raising funds for municipal operations, given its sparse population and lack of affluent households. We are committed to providing monthly statutory levies to assist the municipal authorities in funding their operations. The Bushbuckridge Local Community levy helps support this cause, directly benefiting the local communities through their municipal structures.
